Kenmore Air Names Andrew Bonney Chief Executive Officer

KENMORE, Wash. (July 14, 2026) — Kenmore Air today announced that Andrew Bonney has been appointed Chief Executive Officer, effective September 1, 2026, following a national search conducted by the company's Board of Directors.

Bonney joins Kenmore Air after nearly two decades with Cape Air, the world's largest commuter airline, where he currently serves as Chief Operating Officer. During his tenure, he helped guide the airline through significant growth, expanding its fleet from 51 to more 97 aircraft, expanding the route portfolio to new regions, and strengthening operational performance such that the airline became North America's #1 on-time airline in March – May 2026. Bonney is an active line pilot, reinforcing his hands-on leadership philosophy and deep connection to flight operations.

"Andrew is an exceptional leader whose experience, character, and passion for aviation make him an outstanding fit for Kenmore Air," said Howard Wright, Chairman of the Board for Kenmore Air. "Throughout the search process, we sought someone who not only understood the complexities of operating a regional airline, but who also appreciated what makes Kenmore Air unique across our people, culture, commitment to safety, and our deep roots in the Pacific Northwest. Andrew brings all of those qualities, and we're excited to welcome him to lead Kenmore's next chapter of growth."

In addition to his airline leadership experience, Bonney serves as a Major in the Air National Guard, where he has held leadership positions supporting Air Force medical operations, including active duty during the COVID pandemic. His military service reflects a leadership style grounded in accountability, teamwork, and mission focus.

Bonney will begin transitioning into the role during August, spending time across Kenmore Air's operations before assuming the role full-time on September 1.

"I've long admired Kenmore Air as one of the most respected and recognizable airlines in regional aviation," said Andrew Bonney. "Few companies have the history, reputation, and connection to their communities that Kenmore Air has built over eight decades. What impressed me most throughout this process wasn't just the operation, but the people. Their passion, professionalism, and commitment to guests are extraordinary, and I'm
